

BACKGROUND

A process looking at the town and its needs has been going on for some years. It started in the Honiton Town Council in 1999 as H2K and continued under the auspices of the Honiton Regeneration Trust. This group unfortunately failed to achieve funding, and despite wide public support had to cease operating in August 2001. However, all the evidence of public concerns and wishes gathered by these groups was preserved. The opportunity to revive the process came with the initiative of the Countryside Agency which encouraged villages and towns to undertake a funded process and come up with a plan for their own community. This process had to be under the auspices of the Town or Parish Council, but also involve lay community members. For Honiton our Council launched the process in January 2002.

During the past months the group has taken the information from Honiton Regeneration, has consulted local groups and individuals widely, and sought by means of a questionnaire, the public's opinions on the town, its values and facilities, and hoped-for improvements. As part of the process an action day was organised on 15th April 2003 which aimed to encourage the public to express their evaluation of the town, its buildings and surroundings. The principal purpose of this day was to inform the group with a view to drawing up a Town Design Statement. Such a statement once accepted by the local Council, and East Devon District Council would be used as supplementary planning guidance, empowering the local council to work with East Devon District Council ensuring respect for the built environment of Honiton, and its key features in all planning matters.

Once we had collected a broad spectrum of opinion, as well as that of special interest groups, we had the task of prioritising the issues raised. A further meeting of the public was arranged on 2nd July 2003 at which several groups were tasked to take the issues and work through them. The aim was to clarify each issue, ascertain why it was important, to decide how urgent an issue was, and finally who should take the issue forward. This has enabled us to draw up the Action Plan which is given overleaf.
