The attached photos show the visual impact that the proposed development of 180 houses would have on Whimple.

It would dwarf the existing properties and have a devastating impact on the biodiversity, environment and existing historical orchards (are EDDC even aware of this?). The existing orchards have a clause on them that no pesticides can be used because they are so valuable, so why would you consider destroying for housing that is not needed.

When you view this from a high point the impact is obvious and completely inappropriate when conservation is so high on every councils agenda along with supporting farming in the UK and preserving the very heritage that forms the reason people live here and visitors come to the area

There is no infrastructure or need for such a development.
