

MEMBERS' CODE OF CONDUCT

GENERAL NOTICE OF REGISTERABLE INTERESTS

1. Alexander Philip Stevens being a Member/Co-opted Member of Upottery — Town/Parish Council give notice in this form of those interests which I am required to declare under The Relevant Authorities (Disclosable Pecuniary Interests) Regulations 2012 and the Council's Code of Conduct. I understand that I must also declare any interest of a 'relevant person' [my spouse or civil partner or of any person with whom I am living as a husband or wife or as if we were civil partners] on sections 1-6 of this form, as defined in the Council's Code of Conduct.

I have also declared my personal interests as required by the Code of Conduct, as shown on section 7 of this form.

DISCLOSABLE PECUNIARY INTERESTS

1. Employment, Office, Trade, Profession or Vocation

Please give details of (i) every employment, job, trade, business or vocation you or a relevant person (husband, wife or civil partner) has, for which you receive any benefit or gain (i.e. profit, salary or benefit in kind) including a short description of the activity e.g. 'Accountant' or 'Farmer' and (ii) the name of the employer or body, firm or company which you own or in which you have any beneficial interest.

The first step in the process of the scientific method is to ask a question or make an observation. This leads to the second step, which is to do background research to see what is already known about the topic.

After doing background research, the next step is to form a hypothesis. A hypothesis is a statement that can be tested. It is often written in an "if-then" format. For example, "If I water a plant every day, then it will grow taller than a plant that is not watered every day."

The next step is to test the hypothesis. This is done by conducting an experiment. In an experiment, you change one thing (the independent variable) and see what happens (the dependent variable). In the example above, the independent variable is the amount of water, and the dependent variable is the height of the plant.

After testing the hypothesis, the next step is to analyze the data. This means looking at the results of the experiment and seeing if they support the hypothesis. If the data does support the hypothesis, then you can accept the hypothesis. If the data does not support the hypothesis, then you must reject the hypothesis and start over.

Finally, the last step in the scientific method is to communicate the results. This means sharing your findings with others. You can do this by writing a paper, giving a presentation, or posting your results online. This allows other scientists to see your work and see if they can reproduce your results.

5. Interests in land in the District Council's area (you must include the land and house you or a relevant person live in)

Please give the address or other description (sufficient to identify the location) of any land or property in the District Council's area in which you or a relevant person has a beneficial interest (either as owner, lessee/tenant or licensee including land in which you/they may have a licence, along or with others, to occupy for a period of one month or longer) and state the nature of that interest (for example this would include allotments that you own or use). Where it is not easy to describe the location of the land, you may wish to include a map showing the location/extent of the land in addition.
